

Educators Guide to Fire Safety Education for Children

Fire Safety Education for Children

Children have limited capacity to understand the risks and consequences of fire, and to react promptly and rationally to fire. This lack of knowledge and awareness puts children at risk of misusing fire or being harmed by fire.

Fire safety education is the first line of defence against misuse of fire and fire fatalities and injuries in children. Fire safety education not only prevents fire, it prepares children which improves their response to fire, and empowers children by providing them with the capacity to make informed decisions, enhancing resilience.

Updated Approach

FRNSW has updated its fire safety education programs for children to ensure our approach aligns with current best practice.

The updated programs have been designed to:

- Improve children's fire safety knowledge and skills,
- Facilitate the transfer of knowledge and skill into children's families, households, and communities,
- Reduce the risk children will misuse fire or be harmed by fire, and
- Enhance children's recognition of, and trust in, firefighters.

The updated programs consist of four teacher delivered lessons, one school fire evacuation drill, followed by one firefighter delivered session.

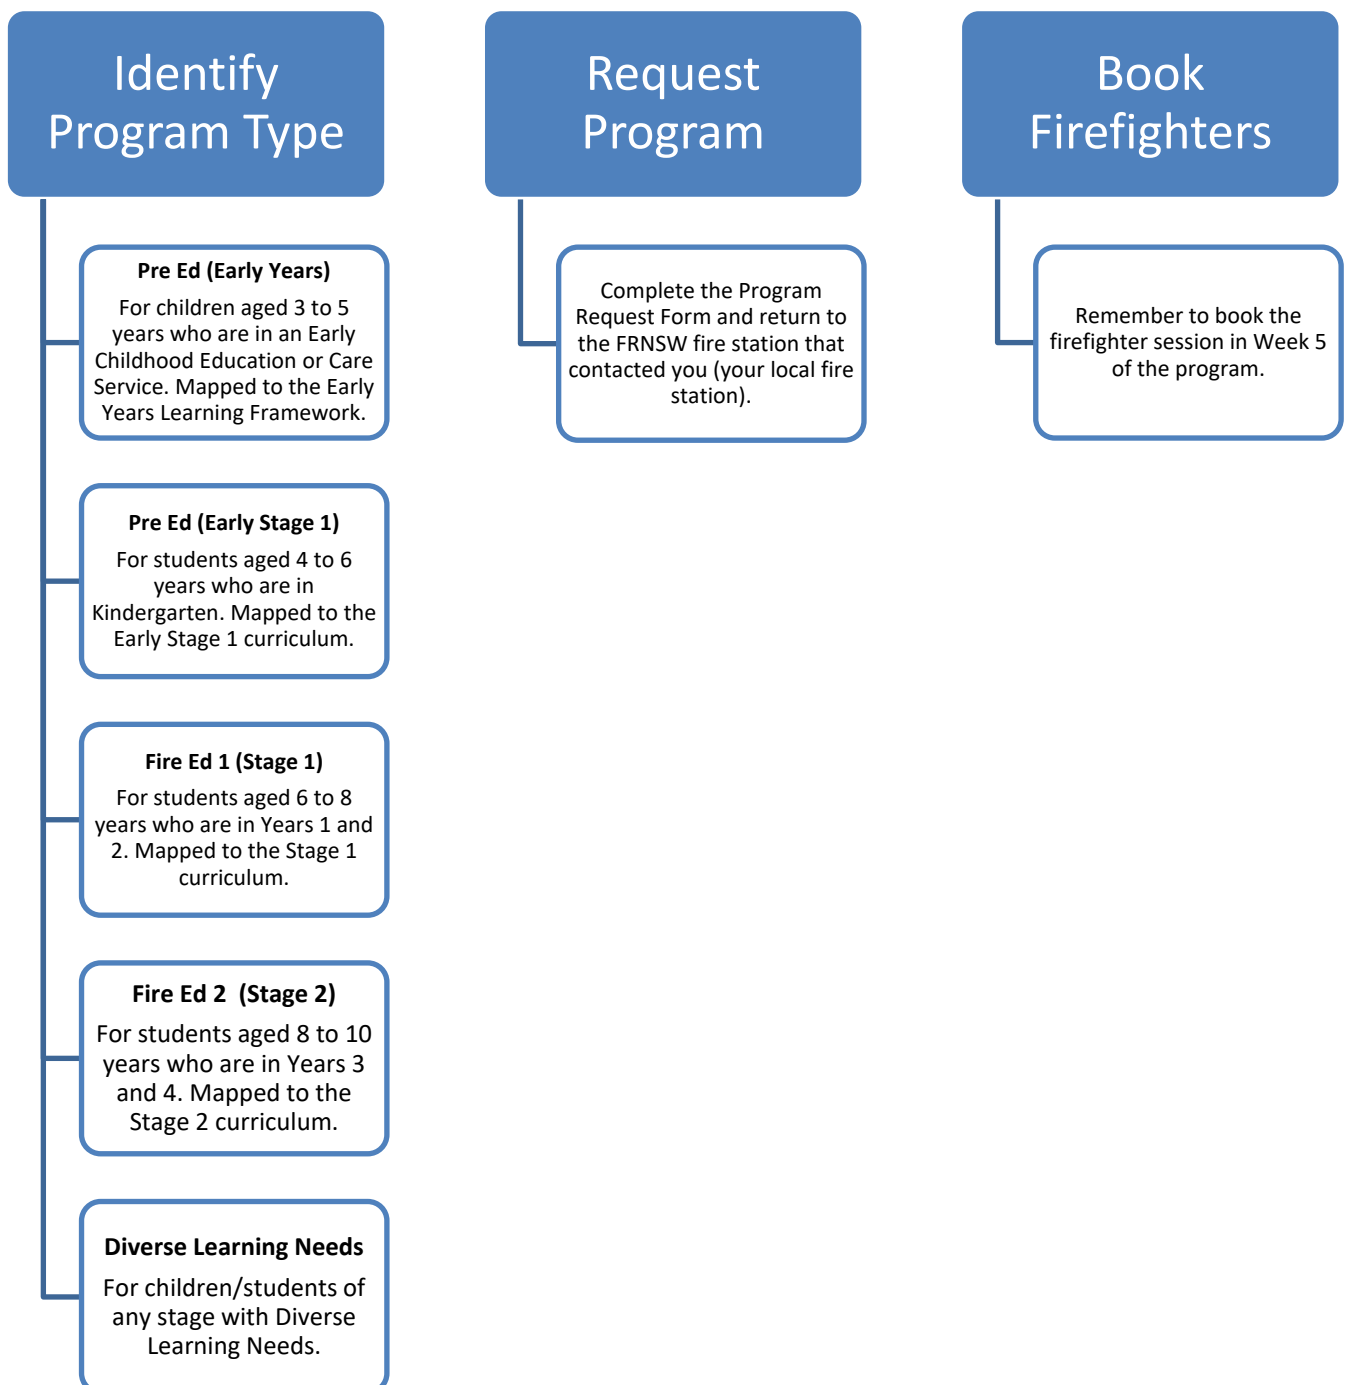

While the teacher delivered lessons educate students about fire safety, the firefighter delivered session reiterates and consolidates learning, while encouraging the formation of positive relationships between children and firefighters. Please note, the fire truck is no longer used as part of the education session.

All programs contain everything educators need to deliver the lessons, including Lesson Plans, Student Workbooks, and Educator/Teacher Resource Kits.

Planning and Delivery

To ensure our updated evidence-based programs are implemented correctly and consistently, planning and delivery must follow the steps below.
